>"Prepare to eat my dust!" Daniel said to his sister.

"Prepare to eat my dust, Danny!" Alice replied.

The brother and sister where playing video games. Since everyone else was out, they decided to enjoy some virtual bonding time.

They concentrated hard as they played the coolest new game called 'Grave Robbing Ghouls.'

"This has got to be the best game ever!" Daniel said.

"Do you think there are such things as grave robbing ghouls!" Alice asked.

"No way." Daniel answered. "But if I ever seen one, I'll let you know."

Little did they know a dark figure was watching them from the ceiling. He dropped down and landed behind the children.

"Greetings."

The kids dropped their controllers and looked over their shoulders to see what looked like-

"A GRAVE ROBBING GHOUL!" Daniel screamed.

"RUN!" Alice shrieked.

The kids ran out of the living rooms screaming in terror. "We've got to get out of here!" said Daniel.

"Not without Joy!" Alice reminded him.

Nodding in agreement, Daniel followed Alice to Joy's room. Their sudden entrance awoke Joy from her nap. The ten month old started crying.

"She must have had another nightmare!" Alice said.

"A nightmare?"

The kids saw the "ghoul" enter the room. "The poor thing." He flew over to Joy and scooped her up in his arms.

Before the siblings could stop him, they saw something they never would have expected.

Instead of scaring Joy, the monster was comforting her. He rocked her gently as he hummed a soft little tune.

And Joy wasn't afraid at all, she actually stopped crying and calmed down.

Seeing how he's gentle with their sister, Alice and Daniel started to calm down themselves and came closer to him.

"Who are you?" Daniel asked.

Alice noticed something famil air about him. "Are you related to Uncle Whampire and Uncle Vamps?"

"Why, yes." The Vladat said with a grin. "I am their father, Vampiro."

"Father?!" the kids said together.

Vampiro nodded. "That's right." He set Joy back into her crib and kneeled down to their height. "So I guess that makes me your great uncle, am I right?"

They were surprised. But before they could say something else, they feel him catch them with his telekinesis

"Hey! I can't move!" Alice yelped.

Daniel struggled. "Me neither!"

"And now that I have you in my clutches..." Vampiro wiggled his claws towards their tummies and began tickling them silly. "Cootchie, cootchie, coo!"

"Ahahahahahaha! Hey! Quit it!" Alice giggled. Her brother was too busy laughing to speak.

Their infectious laughter made Vampiro laugh. "I got you now, my ticklish prisoners! Tickle, tickle, tickle!"

"AHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAEEHEEHEEHEEHEEHEEAHAHAHAHAHAHA!"

The kids giggled and wiggled around trying to be free, but Vampiro's telekinesis was too strong. The devious Vladat was old, but he certainly was cunning.

After a few exhausting minutes of tickle torture, Vampiro decided to be merciful and released the children.

"Not so scary now, am I?" asked Vampiro.

"Nope," Alice said with a smile. "You're definitely related to our uncles."

"And your defiantely not a grave robbing ghoul." said Daniel.

That made Vampiro laugh as he used his telekinesis one more time. He lifted Alice, Daniel and Joy up and held them all in his arms. The children hugged him happily as he held all three of them and smiled.

"Ah, family." said Vampiro. "There's nothing like it."
